

A Terrible Accident

Last week, Jonas had an accident. That morning, Jonas woke up late because he forgot to set his alarm clock. When he woke up, it was already eight o'clock so he rushed to put on his uniform and trotted off to school. Unfortunately, the lift was out of order. He had butterflies in his stomach and he could only take the stairs.

When Jonas arrived the lobby, he was gasping and sweating. He was in a rush so he ran fast without paying attention to the pedestrian lights. All of a sudden, a taxi was driving fast towards Jonas and struck him.

Jonas was badly injured. The taxi driver was sorry for him and he called the ambulance at once. Soon, the ambulance arrived. The ambulancemen then put him onto the stretcher and sent him to the hospital. On the way to the hospital, Jonas felt extremely painful.

Jonas could only lie on bed and do nothing in that week. After a week, Jonas was discharged from the hospital. Jonas knew that he should always pay attention to the pedestrian lights even if he was in a rush.
