

Yesterday morning, the Chan family wanted to have a picnic so they went to the supermarket to buy food. When they arrived, Max and Lily were full of beans. "We can't wait to go to the country park!" they both said. They picked some potato chips, some loaves of bread, bananas and drinks to fill up the shopping cart.

They went to the checkout to buy the food and drinks. "You have twenty-five reward points in your Octopus card. You can have two shopping bags with these points," the cashier said. The family were like a dog with two tails because they didn't need to buy shopping bags in the department store.

Then they took a bus to Tai Tam Country Park to have the picnic. It took them two hours to get there. They got off the bus excitedly. When the doors closed, Max and Lily's mum realized she forgot the two bags of food and drinks in the bus. They wanted to get on the bus to get the two bags of food and drinks but the bus had already left. "Mum, you need to always remember to keep an eye on your belongings," Lily said.

They all went to the country park unhappily, having butterflies in their stomach. Suddenly, they saw the Wong family in front of them. The Wong family ran to the Chan family and asked, "What's the matter? Why do you have long faces?" "We left the food and drinks on the bus," the Chan family answered. "No problem, we have tons of those. We can share them with you," the Wong family replied.

"Thanks!" exclaimed the Chan family. At last, the two families enjoyed the food together in the country park.
